

Deadly Delusions: When the Plans Work All Too Well, by Alan Sabrosky

Prelude

The first week of June, I watched all thirteen episodes of a mini-series called Amerika (1987) I had briefly seen in part thirty-odd years before. Yes, I know it is a Hollywood production. Yes, I know it is fiction, just as I know that (e.g.) 1984 is fiction. Yes, I know many of the details are wrong for our time, most notably that the USSR is gone.

Nonetheless, it shook me profoundly, and I could not understand why. Being a methodological Germanic scholar (perhaps a triple tautology?), I set out to understand why. I watched all thirteen episodes again, then a half-hour summary of the series in a program by the director and the key actors called “Storm Over Amerika,” and finally stayed up all night thinking about what I had seen and heard.

Then I knew, in almost a secular epiphany. We had already been defeated and occupied, left and right alike (no nit-picking on terminology, please, I have no time for that now), assailed by forces within and without – that war is over. I had been trying to stave off a defeat that had already happened. We needed desperately to understand how that had happened to us particularly, and to the West generally, then settle down to considering how badly we can bloody our enemies. After all, as a quasi-historical Roman general is supposed to have said on the eve of the defeat and destruction of his Legion, “This will cost them more than they realize. We shall not have lost altogether.”

The Pathology of the Psyops

So let us begin with understanding what has happened to us in America. I first became acquainted with the planning and execution of psychological operations (psyops) back in the 1960s. I was then a young Marine preparing for Vietnam, and took a course on the subject from the Army's Special Warfare Center (name may have changed). One thesis stayed with me, and resonates today: Amateurs talk about using psyops to break a target's will. Professionals know that the proper use of psyops is to give the target hope, because hope is the mortal enemy of both rational thought and decisive, timely action.

Both aspects are evident in what has to be the most significant psyop in recorded history. Its goals are nothing less than the destruction of Western civilization, as well as the marginalization or virtual eradication of the white race which has been its principal architect and greatest beneficiary. Its aim is nothing less than a future built on some appalling melding` of George Orwell's 1984 and Oswald Spengler's Untergang des Abendlandes (Downfall of the West, usually mistranslated as "Decline" rather than "Downfall" for cosmetic purposes).

Nothing takes place in a vacuum, and whether one defines the goal as the "New World Order" or the "World Economic Forum" or "Greater Israel," all have one thing in common: Jews predominate. Having known quite a few, they seem to be across the Jewish religious spectrum including many secular (non-religious) Jews and others who are more at home with the Talmud than with Torah – even though the latter can be a nasty piece of work (nothing like Deuteronomy in the New Testament). This controlling Jewish presence in international arenas is replicated within the U.S. to a controlling ownership in so many areas that it is easier to find the ones Jews do not dominate than it is to list the ones they do.

Here is where the concern arises. If Jewish ownership of so much was for the good of all – it would be their profit, naturally, otherwise why go into business? – and they knew it and intended to do good to others, why would they howl like bee-stung banshees whenever their predominance was noticed? Yet that is what they do, one and all without exception insofar as I can see, leading to the inescapable conclusion that they do not mean do do us well in the long term, know it, and that they mean every word in the Talmud. Read a few pages sometime and you'll understand what I mean.

Putting the Plans Into Context: The American Model

All countries do not have the same plan or the same models, but that presented in Figure 1 captures the American experience quite well. Shown are the two controlling groups: I am going to use the commonly accepted term “Neoliberals” or “Neolibs” for the one running the Democrats on the Left (and again, leave quibbling about “what is a Leftist” to the comments, please!), and “Neoconservatives” or “Neocons” to the one running the Republicans on the Right. Both Neocons and Neolibs agree generally on two things: (1) Israel is to be protected at all costs, and (2) the proper role of the U.S. in world affairs is to support Israeli interests and to block hostile actions against it by other countries. Aside from the consensus on these two main points, which as many as possible of those within their respective party coalitions must support, there are major – and sometimes severe – differences. These are akin to the “faction fights” that existed between Stalin and Trotsky in the early Soviet Union, or in China Between traditionalists like Chou En-lai and the Red Guards with their “Cultural Revolution.”

In the U.S., the Neocons are the traditionalists, believing that an America that is politically, economically and demographically stable internally offers Israel the best possible guarantor of its own security – a happy, well-fed 800-pound gorilla, if you will.

But the Neolibs – looking to the future – dismiss that argument. They prefer to restructure the country internally along the lines of their radical agenda, building on tens of millions of blacks and Hispanics within and importing tens of millions more, to guarantee a permanent one-party majority: their own. And it is working: note that 18 – 21 million known migrants 2021-2024 excluded from data.

The Dueling Plans: Delusion Meets Denial

Neither term applies to the leadership and their cohorts in either the Neolibs or the Neocons, much less the national and state political committees of the parties under their immediate control. I am not quite sure just what terms apply to them, but I sense that in a theological context, their misconduct would likely activate the worst penalties of the Holy Inquisition or the heart-wrenching attention of the Aztec priesthood – and justifiably so.

What is self-evident is that in the U.S., there has been a gradual accumulation of Jewish influence and power across the spectrum of professions from at least the early 1960s onward. Most critical in terms of their influence on society as a whole was the growth in their presence in education, the media, the entertainment industry, advertising, banking and finance, and pharmaceuticals. This was consolidated somewhere between the beginning of the Bush administration in 2001 and the end of the Obama administration in 2017.

Not least is their total control of the mainstream media (MSM) and the US Government. They can and do differ slightly (for cosmetic effect?) on minor issues, but on core issues, especially those affecting Israel, they align remarkably closely with one another. On the MSM, one has the sense of being in a media echo chamber. Moreover, every administration, Republican and Democrat, from Clinton onward has been approximately half Jewish in its cabinet appointments and senior sub-cabinet political appointments, many dual Israeli citizens. I'd ask rhetorically where their primary allegiance lay, except I am sure anyone literate enough to read this knows it is NOT the United States.

There has been one significant development in recent years that merits attention. When I wrote "Riposte Against Zionism: Go Tell It to the People" in 2011, I could make a good case for going to the state and local levels because most were free of Zionist influence. (Former US Senator Mike Gravel, a Democrat with decency and good sense who died in 2021, argued about the same time for approaching state legislatures for the same purpose.) Both approaches could have worked a decade ago, but no longer. The Neolibs in particular are working their way down to county and city levels – and they are doing it fast, building a power base they OR the Neocons can use, even if the latter haven't yet told "Joe & Judy 6-pack" that dirty little secret yet.

Plan A: The Neolibs on the Cusp of Victory

So let's look at "Plan A" – the one the Neolib elite have given their delusional followers, and one which has brought them to the cusp of victory – and they know it. I do not intend to do a blow-by-blow recounting of the rise of the "woke world," Antifa and BLM and the rest; you can find that here. The insanities of the "gender goulash" dysphoria are beyond any single treatment (pun intended), as is the single-minded, hard-headed, utterly irrational and anti-historic drumbeat on identity politics and racism as the be-all and end-all of society and politics.

Yet they have propelled their followers and activists to electoral victory, real or contrived, in so many places. "What good is a stolen election?" the winner of one such election in the early 1900s was asked. "It means I am mayor," he replied, "Until next time." As far as I can tell, only a handful of stolen elections have been overturned in the courts. Many Federal and state elections were visibly stolen, but Joe Biden – a senile, incestuous pedophile – remains president despite fraud so blatant as to be vile, and Katie Hobbs – a nicer person (how could one be worse?) – holds her stolen seat as governor of Arizona. There are others, at all levels. Many others. All – as far as I can tell – Democrats. And either complete silence of total denial from the MSM.

More painful is what is happening to our society under the banner of DEI (Diversity, Equity, Inclusion). This is shorthand for forcibly incorporating people who are mentally, physically and/or intellectually unfit for the positions they want, a process that makes the old-fashioned "affirmative action" programs pale by comparison. "Affirmative action," slipping in through Human Resources offices, is a major reason so much of America is no longer competitive with their foreign counterparts. DEI is driving a stake through our heart. The neolib's know this, and do not care, because they expect to build a better society on the ashes of its predecessor. Precisely how that will be done remains to be seen. But they have clearly persuaded their followers that it is possible.

Last, but not least, and actually most important of all, is what is being done to the children, far too often with the active participation or support of their mothers and without any active opposition from the fathers – if present. I wrote on this earlier, took my licks, got my scars, and press on, bloodied but unbowed.

BUT I stand by the basic thesis. Because so many women, especially under 30, support gender transformation and the entire “woke” agenda with so little opposition from the fathers, it is all but impossible to reverse what the Neolibs – especially on the school boards and in the teachers unions – have set in motion. There are about 17,000 school districts currently organized by the two national teachers unions (National Education Association and American Federation of Teachers).

Good data on this issue are uncommonly difficult to find, but it seems that there has been successful push-back from parents in fewer than 1% of those districts. I don’t know about you, but to me, this spells catastrophe 20-30 years out, unless something dramatic and significant (the two are not always synonymous) occurs. Yes, resistance is solidifying. Yes, homeschooling enrollment is expected to reach 5 million in a year or two, and it is generally very good. And most of all, at least to its followers, there is “The Plan.”

Plan B: What Could Possibly Go Wrong with Doing Nothing?

Well, in a word, everything. Wrong-headed or not, when the Left called for a demonstration or sit-in, organized a march with a high probability of escalating into a riot, or wanted people to burn a police station or a Federal building, it is absolutely astonishing how many people turned up. I expect very few were motivated by ideology or a sense of making things right. Simple boredom or a desire for loot would be enough. But turn up they did – and it helped greatly that virtually no one did anything to stop them in their tracks.

This has been the norm in US “civil disorders” at least since the 1960s. So when violence – I am certain it was pre-planned, waiting only the right spark – exploded in May 2020 and spread rapidly across the country, local authorities and state officials (almost all Democrats) did little or nothing to stop the rioters and restore order. That put the ball in President Trump’s court (read the Constitution lately?), who – aside from sending briefly a few US Marshals to get themselves entrapped – also did nothing, which I believe cost him the election later that year.

Finally, faced with this abdication of responsibility by the “hero” of MAGA, what did “We the People” – the most heavily armed civilian population in history – do? Nothing. Why not? Because that WAS “Plan B,” it worked perfectly, and that was when we lost our country – not in the November election, but before it by our own cowardice.

You can see this starting during Trump’s 2016 campaign, going into overdrive during his presidency, peaking from the 2020 election thru Biden’s inauguration and continuing unchecked throughout Biden’s tenure in office. Sometimes it was “Q!” in one form or another. Other times it was a screen name like “Juan O’Sevin (sp?).” Or it might be a hidden clause in the Insurrection Act of 1807 that allowed Trump to act as president in the background (!), or special ops forces preparing a takeover, or the armed forces really on Trump’s side, or...the permutations seem endless.

Whatever guise they assume, all variants of “Plan B” have one thing in common: all counsel wait and do nothing. The White Hats are doing their thing and will save us all. Why do they do this? Because the Neolibs running the Left and the Neocons running the Right fear an aroused, angered, heavily armed US citizenry above all things on this earth. If we rise before their own preparations are done, their street fighters and ghetto trash won’t last as long as a lighted candle in a strong wind – and they know it.

I simply do not know if Americans today have the fortitude to recognize the magnitude of the catastrophe confronting us, nor the extent to which ALL of our principal leaders of both parties are bonded “hip and thigh” as the saying goes to Jewish money and Jewish media, and subservient to Israel as a country over the United States. Not just the Democrats, who traditionally garner 80% of the Jewish vote. But Trump, DeSantis, Haley, Abbott – even Kristi Noem and Tulsi Gabbard have bent the knee to them. Dark days ahead and dire portents, but I’ll try to clarify how we got here in my next article: “The Culling Fields.”
